You might classify the sample into four categories: (1) worthy, (2) possible, (3) unlikely, and (4) unworthy, and make a judgment of the degree of membership of each of the four categories to the type of sample. The sifter is: 1. very versatile 2. simple and inexpensive. It is, of course, a rule of thumb but sometimes a very good rule of thumb” Charles Ross 2 “The sifter can be used to make three types of evaluation: a priori, in order to reject unworthy samples; predictive, for deciding if you’ll get to the next stage of the study; and retrospective, when you’ve decided what you’ll do next.” 3 “You begin by deciding what type of study you are doing. There are only four possibilities: (1) a two- stage study. (2) a one- stage study. (3) a two- stage study that you plan to reject some of the samples, and (4) a one- stage study that you plan to reject some of the samples. Each is named for the initial decision point.” 4 “A
